Suggested Lesson Plan

These materials may be used in a variety of ways. For maximum benefit, we suggest the following lesson plan:

- As a class, discuss the Preview Questions & Key Terms.
- Distribute copies of the Viewing Guide for students to use as a note-taking tool during the video.
- Play the video, pausing if needed to facilitate understanding and note-taking.
- Review and discuss answers to the Viewing Guide using Answer Key as a guide.
- Use Discussion Questions to spark class discussion or assign these questions as homework.
- As a class or in small groups, complete the Who Chooses Activity
- Replay the video as preparation for the Quiz.
- Administer and grade the Quiz using Answer Key as a guide.
- Optional: Assign one or more Enrichment Activities as homework.

If you got this guide from a DVD, please check this video's product page on izzit.org. There could be an updated Teacher's Guide with additional/revised material.

The Civil War:

A Nation Divided

Key Terms & Definitions

13th Amendment: Abolished slavery and involuntary servitude, except as punishment for a crime

14th Amendment: Made former slaves citizens and ensured equal protection and rights

15th Amendment: Granted African-American men the right to vote

Abolish: Formally put an end to (a system, practice, or institution)

Alliance: A union or association formed for mutual benefit, especially between countries or organizations

Appeal: Apply to a higher court for a reversal of the decision of a lower court or make a serious or urgent request, typically to the public

Black Codes: Laws passed in 1865 and 1866 by Southern States in the United States after the American Civil War to restrict African-Americans' freedom and compel them to work in a labor economy based on low wages or debt.

Civil Liberties: Individual rights protected by law from unjust governmental or other interference

Civil Rights: The rights to political and social freedom and equality

Civil War: A war between factions in the same country

Confederate: Of or having to do with the Southern Confederacy during the American Civil War

Confederation: A union of countries with some or most political power vested in a central authority

Dred Scott v. Sandford: A landmark 1857 Supreme Court decision (7–2) that African-Americans were not and could never be citizens of the United States; and that the Missouri Compromise (1820), which had declared free all territories west of Missouri and north of latitude 36°30', was unconstitutional. "Invented" a constitutional right to own slaves.

Emancipation Proclamation: A presidential proclamation issued by Abraham Lincoln that nominally freed all slaves in areas of rebellion

Executive Order: A rule or order issued by the president which has much the same power as a law except it can be overturned by congressional order

Fundamental: Serving as an essential component

Incompatible: Two (or more) things so opposed in character as to be incapable of existing together

Activity: Who Chooses? Who Benefits? Who Pays? What's Fair?

The four questions above can be a useful tool for evaluating any policy or system. Posing the questions is a great way to stimulate critical thinking. As a class, or in small groups, discuss the following:

(For each question, think broadly about all the possible people or groups of people who may be affected, and remember there may be non-monetary costs and benefits.)

1. Who chose the system of slavery? (Think beyond - and before - the United States as well.) Why? Who chose which people(s) to enslave? Why did they choose those people(s)?
2. Who benefited from slavery? (Think broadly and beyond the United States itself. Also think of the United States at the time as a whole.) How did they benefit?
3. Who paid for slavery? How? (Again, think broadly and beyond just monetary costs.) Who paid for ending slavery at the time of the Civil War? How?
4. Thinking of the Dred Scott decision, was the Supreme Court's decision fair? Why or why not?
5. Is slavery completely ended in the world? Why or why not? If not, who benefits from modern-day slavery? Who pays for it?

Enrichment & Integration Activities

Research Projects: Work independently or in small groups. Choose one or more of the topics below to learn more about. Gather information from multiple sources to help answer the questions. Create a report that includes both written and visual elements such as pictures, charts, and graphs. Be sure to cite your sources. Share your findings with the class in a presentation.

A. Research the various conflicts between the Northern states and the Southern states that ultimately resulted in the Civil War. Focus research upon how the two main issues of slavery and the conflict over states vs. federal rights led the two parts of the country to war. Design two opposing multimedia campaigns, one for the North and one for the South, advocating for those two positions' points of view. Choose one or two from the ideas below for your campaign:

A propaganda poster

A theme song (lyrics and music)

A commercial (this can be an iMovie or a live presentation in front of the class)

A bumper sticker

Any additional pieces that you feel fit your campaigns

B. Our third President, Thomas Jefferson, wrote the Declaration of Independence. In the Preamble, he wrote, " We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Jefferson was a slave owner himself. Research Thomas Jefferson and his writings on slavery. Write an essay answering the following questions: In your opinion, what was Jefferson's attitude toward slavery? Did his attitude change over time? How would you describe Jefferson's treatment of his slaves? Did he believe they were his equals? Why or why not? Did Thomas Jefferson free any of his slaves during his lifetime? Were any of his slaves freed upon his death? Explain your answers by giving details found in your research. Does the fact that Thomas Jefferson owned slaves lessen your opinion of him? Explain your answer.

Use izzit.org's video, Becoming Equal Under the Law, to help begin your research.

- C. Students write a short response essay to the prompt “...with liberty and justice for all.” What does this phrase mean to them? How has this changed over time? Ask students to switch papers with a neighbor to discuss the short essays. As students read each other's paper, they may ask the writer questions they have about it and share what new ideas his or her paper gave them.
- D. Have students pretend that they are a soldier for either the North or South. They have just received the news about the Emancipation Proclamation. Have them write a letter home focusing on their individual reaction to the executive order.
- E. Have students pretend that they are a slave in the South and just received news about the Emancipation Proclamation. Have them write a journal entry focusing on their individual reaction to the executive order. (Make sure students understand the irony of this assignment in that very few slaves could read and write.)
- F. More Writing Activities
Put yourself in the position of a free African-American living in Jefferson's times. Write a personal letter to Thomas Jefferson expressing your concern about the institution of slavery. You may choose to include questions for Jefferson's response.

Lesson Procedures:
(Approx. Time)

1. Have students look at the Preamble and Article I, Section 9, Clause 1 of the U.S. Constitution. Give students time to compare these documents. How are these documents in conflict with one another? What do you think the phrase "We the people of the United States" means? Explain to students that the Dred Scott decision revolved around interpreting this constitutional phrase. Students should keep this in mind during the lesson.

2. PROCEDURES:

a. Watch video: The Civil War: A Nation Divided

b. Divide the class into groups of four.

c. Pass out the excerpts of the "Majority Opinion" and "Dissenting Opinion" to each group. Have the students read both documents and answer the following questions (This can be done the night before as a pre-reading homework assignment).

- What were the major legal issues considered in the Dred Scott decision?
- According to the "Majority Opinion," how and why does the Constitution protect slavery?
- According to the "Majority Opinion," why were slaves not considered to be people?
- Based on the "Dissenting Opinion," what historical evidence does the author use to support the claim that "colored persons" were citizens?
- What are the differences in interpretation of "We the people" in these two documents?

Have each group share their findings and create a class comparison on the board.

Utilize a reading strategy such as "Marking the Text" to help students understand the primary documents.

d. Have students write an editorial on the Supreme Court's decision in Dred Scott v. Sandford case. The editorial should be written from the point of view of either an abolitionist or a slave owner at the time of the ruling

e. Lead a class discussion on the following questions:

- What problems would you have if you had no rights?
- How do you believe that Northern abolitionists responded to the case?
- How do you believe that Southern slave owners responded to the case?

Summary & Assessment:

Have students write an editorial on the Supreme Court's decision in the Dred Scott v. Sandford case. The editorial should be written from the point of view of either an abolitionist or a slave owner at the time of the ruling.

Reflection:
(5 minutes)

Students complete an exit ticket answering the following question: Why can a court ruling have such a huge impact on a political/social issue?

DRED SCOTT V. SANFORD (1857)
Majority Opinion (Chief Justice Taney)

Retrieved from <https://supreme.justia.com/cases/federal/us/60/393/>

“The question before us is whether the class of persons described in the plea in abatement compose a portion of this people, and are constituent members of this sovereignty? We think they are not, and that they are not included, and were not intended to be included, under the word “citizens” in the Constitution, and can therefore claim none of the rights and privileges which that instrument provides for and secures to citizens of the United States. On the contrary, they were at that time considered as a subordinate and inferior class of beings who had been subjugated by the dominant race, and, whether emancipated or not, yet remained subject to their authority, and had no rights or privileges but such as those who held the power and the Government might choose to grant them....

The language of the Declaration of Independence is equally conclusive: It begins by declaring that, “[w]hen in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and nature’s God entitle them, a decent respect for the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.”

It then proceeds to say: “We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among them is [sic] life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, Governments are instituted, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.”

The general words above quoted would seem to embrace the whole human family, and if they were used in a similar instrument at this day would be so understood. But it is too clear for dispute that the enslaved African race were not intended to be included, and formed no part of the people who framed and adopted this declaration, for if the language, as understood in that day, would embrace them, the conduct of the distinguished men who framed the Declaration of Independence would have been utterly and flagrantly inconsistent with the principles they asserted, and instead of the sympathy of mankind to which they so confidently appealed, they would have deserved and received universal rebuke and reprobation....

Upon these considerations, it is the opinion of the court that the act of Congress which prohibited a citizen from holding and owning property of this kind in the territory of the United States north of the line therein mentioned is not warranted by the Constitution, and is therefore void, and that neither Dred Scott himself nor any of his family were made free by being carried into this territory, even if they had been carried there by the owner with the intention of becoming a permanent resident....

Upon the whole, therefore, it is the judgment of this court that it appears by the record before us that the plaintiff in error is not a citizen of Missouri in the sense in which that word is used in the Constitution.”

Dissenting Opinion (Justice Benjamin Curtis)

Retrieved from <https://billofrightsintstitute.org/e-lessons/dred-scott-v-sanford-1857-excerpts-from-majority-and-dissenting-opinions>

One mode of approaching this question is, to inquire who were citizens of the United States at the time of the adoption of the Constitution...

At the time of the ratification of the Articles of Confederation, all free native-born inhabitants of the States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, and North Carolina, though descended from African slaves, were not only citizens of those States, but such of them as had the other necessary qualifications possessed the franchise of electors [the right to vote], on equal terms with other citizens...

I dissent, therefore, from that part of the opinion of the majority of the court, in which it is held that a person of African descent cannot be a citizen of the United States; and I regret I must go further, and dissent both from what I deem their assumption of authority to examine the constitutionality of the act of Congress commonly called the Missouri compromise act, and the grounds and conclusions announced in their opinion...

[T]he Constitution has not failed to make an express provision for [the authority of Congress to legislate for the territories] and ... it is found in the third section of the fourth article of the Constitution. Claims of the United States, or of any particular State.]

It will not be questioned that, when the Constitution of the United States was framed and adopted, the allowance and the prohibition of negro slavery were recognised subjects of municipal legislation; every State had in some measure acted thereon; and the only [federal] legislative act concerning the territory – the ordinance of 1787, which had then so recently been passed — contained a prohibition of slavery. The purpose and object of the clause being to enable Congress to provide a body of municipal law for the government of the settlers, the allowance or the prohibition of slavery comes within the known and recognised scope of that purpose and object...

If it can be shown, by anything in the Constitution itself, that when it confers on Congress the power to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory belonging to the United States, the exclusion or the allowance of slavery was excepted; or if anything in the history of this provision tends to show that such an exception was intended by those who framed and adopted the Constitution to be introduced into it, I hold it to be my duty carefully to consider, and to allow just weight to such considerations in interpreting the positive text of the Constitution. But where the Constitution has said all needful rules and regulations, I must find something more than theoretical reasoning to induce me to say it did not mean all...

Dissenting Opinion (Justice Benjamin Curtis)

Notes

Slavery, being contrary to natural right, is created only by municipal law. This is not only plain in itself, and agreed by all writers on the subject, but is inferable from the Constitution, and has been explicitly declared by this court. The Constitution refers to slaves as "persons held to service in one State, under the laws thereof." ...

It was certainly understood by the Convention which framed the Constitution, and has been so understood ever since, that, under the power to regulate commerce, Congress could prohibit the importation of slaves; and the exercise of the power was restrained till 1808. A citizen of the United States owns slaves in Cuba, and brings them to the United States, where they are set free by the legislation of Congress. Does this legislation deprive him of his property without due process of law? If so, what becomes of the laws prohibiting the slave trade? If not, how can a similar regulation respecting a Territory violate the fifth amendment of the Constitution? ...

For these reasons, I am of opinion that so much of the several acts of Congress as prohibited slavery and involuntary servitude within that part of the Territory of Wisconsin ... were constitutional and valid laws.

Timeline - The Causes of the Civil War

Name: _____

Date: _____

Class Period: _____

1791 - The 10th Amendment: Says that if the Constitution does not give power directly to the federal government, the power goes to the state.

1798 - Alien and Sedition Act: The Alien Act made it more difficult for immigrants to live in the U.S. The Sedition Act made it a crime for anyone to write or say anything bad or false about the government.

1799 - The Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions: Says that the Alien and Sedition Acts were unconstitutional, so Virginia and Kentucky were not going to follow those Acts.

1814 - Hartford Convention: A group of Federalists met during the War of 1812 to discuss the economic impact of the British Blockade on the trading industry. New England states suggested that they should secede from the Union.

1820 - The Missouri Compromise: Missouri entered the Union as a slave state and Maine entered as a free state. Slavery was prohibited in any new territories or states formed north of the 36 30' latitude line.

1832 - The Tariff of 1832: Congress passed a tariff tax on iron, textiles, and other manufactured goods which hurt the Southern economy.

1832 - Nullification Crisis: South Carolina called a state convention to nullify the tariff. They warned the federal government not to use force to collect the taxes or they would secede from the Union. Many Southern leaders feared that if the federal government could pass and enforce the tariffs, they could try to end slavery.

1850 - Compromise of 1850: California joined the Union as a free state. Slavery in all other territories would be decided by popular sovereignty.

1854 – Kansas-Nebraska Act: The issue of slavery would be decided by popular sovereignty in Kansas and Nebraska Territories.

1857 - Dred Scott v. Sandford: The Supreme Court ruled that African-Americans, whether free or slave, were not considered citizens, and that the Missouri Compromise was unconstitutional. Even if slaves were moved to a free state, they would still be slaves.

1860 - Abraham Lincoln is Elected and Secession Begins: Lincoln was against the extension of slavery to new states but did not say that slavery should be abolished in the South. Fearing that Lincoln's government would abolish slavery, South Carolina was the first state to secede from the Union.

1. Using the timeline, rank in order of importance, the events that you feel were the biggest causes of the Civil War. Why?

2. How did legislation lead to the expansion of slavery? Why did compromise not work? What other solutions might have been proposed?

3. Why was there conflict between the states and the federal government? Could this have been avoided? How?
